Volume 8, Number 1 (2020): Essays in Honor of Philip Lampe

Call for Submissions

The editors of Verbum Incarnatum seek submissions for its latest volume, which will celebrate and honor the memory of Philip Lampe, a beloved faculty member who taught courses in Sociology and advocated passionately for social justice. As a founder and editor of Verbum Incarnatum, Dr. Lampe guided the journal's progress and maintained its focus on social justice even while welcoming scholarship from multiple disciplines that explored and interrogated the intersection of economic, political, environmental, racial, and gender justice. In keeping with Dr. Lampe's passion, we welcome essays from all disciplines that address social justice, broadly conceived, whether that be contributive, distributive, or commutative social justice, or a combination of or variation on the three. Treatments of social justice from an interdisciplinary perspective are also welcome. We invite contributions from activists, industry leaders, and scholars.

Manuscript Guidelines

Verbum Incarnatum publishes a range of material. In addition to double-blind, peer-reviewed academic articles, the journal includes reviews, debate, opinion, interviews, and art. Recommended article length is between 2000 - 7000 words, approximately.

Manuscripts should be submitted approximately by Friday, November 6th, 2020 via the online submission portal at <https://athenaeum.uiw.edu/verbumincarnatum/>.

Verbum Incarnatum also encourages submissions from graduate students in all fields, particularly work that deepens our understanding of equity, access, participation, and rights.
